

COMMON THESIS FORMATTING MISTAKES

Below are some common formatting mistakes with thesis and thesis proposal submissions. Information is included on how to avoid and correct these mistakes. Ultimately, the Thesis Manual should be utilized for questions related to style and formatting.

FONT AND SPACING

All text throughout the thesis should be the same font.

In particular, students will want to ensure that text included in the header or footer, such as page numbers, match the font used for the body of text. It is generally recommended that students use Times New Roman 12 point font when writing their thesis.

Double spacing should be used throughout the thesis, including the preliminary/cover pages.

More information on font and spacing can be found starting on page 7 of the Thesis Manual.

MARGINS

Ensure that all text, including page numbers, falls inside the following margins:

Top = 1”

Bottom = 1”

Right = 1”

To avoid submitting a thesis and having to correct the margins, it is recommended that students print a selection of their document and measure with a ruler from the edge of the page to their body of text. It is imperative that the left margin is at 1.25” to ensure that text is not obscured once copies are bound. Please refer to Thesis Margins with Notes and Margins for Page Number Placement for more information.

In most instances, page numbers will start with the Dedication/Acknowledgement section, which is typically numbered as page “iii” (the title page and electronic signature page are technically pages “i” and “ii” but should not be numbered; the physical signature page is for official records).

Lastly, pages need to match the Table of Contents.

More information on pagination can be found on page 9 of the Thesis Manual.

SECTION TITLES

Section titles should be centered, all caps, and begin on a new page.

All section titles should match the Table of Contents and thesis titles should be consistent on cover pages.

More information on chapter/section titles can be found on page 15 of the Thesis Manual.
